The Church

The building, lights, music and spoken word all make a family within the walls of a church. Growing up, I was always around a church and attended multiple different youth groups. It seemed as though I was always at a church somewhere. It didn't make a difference where I went, it was for the same reason each time.

I loved the people, the feel of the pews, the words within each song. Not to mention, of course, the great food after the services. I couldn't get enough of the environment of a church building. I loved being in the sanctuary.

Each time the doors were open and that bell rang, I knew I needed to be inside. But it was the same feeling at every church I went to. I used to think it was just the church I attended but then moving on and seeking more, I found myself loving each sanctuary differently. But what was the attraction towards the sanctuary?

Everyone being brought together made me feel loved. When the Holy Spirit is involved, any place can feel like home. The church is where anyone can belong and be loved with open arms. My church is a sacred part of who I am and my walk with the Lord.
